Banks Are Good Says G. B. S. to Bryan For War—or Health A "Socony Church"

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1925, by the Star Company.

A GOOD BUSINESS is banking on a stock ownership basis. It is not so good for clerks.

The First National Bank of New York, with George F. Baker, on his road to ninety, at the head of it, pays a three months' dividend of 25 per cent.—100 per cent. a year. The price of the stock jumped $140 in a day.

HOWEVER, if you don't happen to own bank stocks, don't be entirely discouraged. One good idea, born in your brain, independent of any board of directors, may make you more money than the value of any bank stock in the world.

Everything Henry Ford has is based on one idea. And he could buy the First National Bank as easily as you buy a Ford car.

"LET US cultivate our garden," said old Voltaire. "Let us cultivate our little bank," says the modern financier. A bank pays better than a garden. The First National was established in 1863 with $200,000 of stock capital. The dividend now declared, for three months only, amounts to $2,500,000, at the rate of $10,000,000 a year. Quite a good return on $200,000.

The First National breaks all bank records up to date. But watch the National City Bank, and especially some of the combination banks with many branches, now run on modern "chain store" lines. They will surprise you.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW says what W. J. Bryan calls "fundamentalism" is really infantilism. That is a good word.

Shaw in a discussion with Hilaire Belloc, another of Mr. Bryan's "concrete" style of mind, found an excellent comparison. Those that deny evolution, says he, think that the universe and life are like the oceans—always restless, doing nothing but drowning people, "killing, killing, killing."

"People who have no conception of evolution," says Shaw, "have no future, no hope."

THAT WILL annoy Mr. Bryan, firmly convinced that when he leaves Miami his next stop will be Heaven, with a place in the front row, and a good, delightful view of Professor Scopes of Tennessee, George Bernard Shaw, Darwin and Voltaire, all burning up together, in a place where the "worm dieth not."

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN, representing the British Empire, complains of the amount of money the League of Nations spends on its health department. England has to pay her share.

LAST YEAR the League spent on health $175,000, and this year threatens to spend $250,000.

That amount during the war would have been fired off on any front in wasted metal and a few destroyed lives in half a minute.

Our civilization is shown in the fact that nations united were willing to spend two hundred thousand million dollars on war and object to spend $250,000 on health.

DR. FOSDICK, a "Modernist," who goes so far as to suggest that Jonah might have been smothered or even digested in the whale's belly, is chosen pastor of the Rockefeller Church in New York.

That agitates Dr. Straton, "Fundamentalist," who knows that the whale DID swallow Jonah. Dr. Straton calls Dr. Fosdick the clergyman of the "Socony Church," stirring up a quarrel shocking to laymen.

"Socony," you know, is made up of Standard Oil Company of New York. How is it that a Fundamentalist, angry, when you deny him the whale-Jonah part of the Bible, allows himself to disregard completely the part about turning the other cheek?

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, returning from the Northwest after a most enthusiastic reception, is happy, having seen in one day more American people than any President ever saw

Forty-eight buildings were reduced to ashes. Photo was taken in the Bay View avenue district. HUB FIRE BOAT SAVES COLONY WHEN FLAMES GET BEYOND CONTROL

Fanned by a stiff northwest breeze, flames swept the Summer resort section of Bass Point, Nahant, early today, destroying 48 homes, cottages and boarding houses, while fire departments of six communities fought helplessly.

The firemen were handicapped by an inadequate water supply, and only the arrival of a Boston fireboat is believed to have prevented a conflagration.

The fireboat pumped streams of salt water which effectively checked the blaze and prevented its spread to a number of hotels and imposing residences, some of which were only a short distance from the home of the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

Fed on the sun-dried wood of the cottages, the flames swept an area between a quarter and a half mile long and about 300

In the presences of District Attorney Winfield Wilbur of Norfolk County and State Detective Michael Fleming, the eighteen-year-old boy is reported to have told the officers

M'MILLAN PLANES SAFE AT SQUANTUM

A flight of forty miles before breakfast brought Donald B. MacMillan's third amphibian plane, NA-3 up to Squantum today from Sazamore on the Cape, where she was forced down last night by darkness.

Except that they believed one of the other two planes in trouble above Philadelphia and turned back and landed on the false alarm, the NA-3 would have slipped down on Squantum with the others. Machinist Mates Floyd Bennett and A. C. Knowles, in charge of the ship, said.

SHEPHERD GERM DEATH STORY UNFOLDED

Olson First Witness: Guardian Pins Hope on the Lack of State Proof

Chicago, June 11 (A.P.)—The trial of William D. Shepherd for the murder of his millionaire foster son, William N. McClintock, entered its second stage today after the weary grind of jury selection ended three weeks and three days of effort.

Opening arguments and placing of a few State witnesses on the stand constituted the program for today. State Attorney Robert E. Crowe said he would outline the prosecution's case to the jury but he declined to divulge his intentions.

Chief Justice Harry Olson of the municipal court has been announced as the State's first witness. It was he who instituted the inquiry into McClintock's death last December, and who was denounced in court by W. S. Stewart, chief defence counsel as "vindictive" and "vicious" toward Shepherd.

The second State witness will be Alexander Reichman, an attorney.

Following them will be the doctors who attended McClintock in his last illness and the coroner's chemist, who performed an autopsy.

The prosecution depends upon circumstantial evidence and the uncorroborated testimony of Charles C. Paiman, self-termed accomplice of Shepherd in the killing. Paimen has testified that he supplied typhoid germs and taught Shepherd how to kill McClintock with them for a promised $100,000 of the youth's estate, of which Shepherd had been made the chief beneficiary in a will Shepherd drew for signature only a few minutes before the "millionaire orphan" died.

The jury comprises the following: A proof reader, clerk, florist, rental agent, laundryman, round house employe, claim adjuster, hoisting engineer, railroad official, clothing salesman, bank vault custodian and a street car employe.

The State charges that Shepherd killed McClintock by feeding him typhoid germs. The defense denies the charge but adds in effect: "What of it—the State will have to show it was those same typhoid germs that killed McClintock."

OPEN DRIVE ON 'PETTING BEES'

No longer are the banks of the Charles River to be the two sides of paradise for petters and tipplers.

Metropolitan Park police, headed by Sergeants Chisholm and Philbrick, and assisted by Policewoman McKinnon, are out to clean up Charles River Esplanade and the Memorial Drive.

Petters will be shown no quarter. Nor bibulous ones who stagger to the river's edge to sleep off their jags. There have been numerous complaints.

ST. LOUIS MAYOR DARES STATE TO SUE FOR TAX

St. Louis, June 11 (A.P.).—Suit will be filed against more than 2,000 individuals for delinquent State income taxes by City Collector Koeln. Among the delinquents, according to his own statement, is Mayor V. J. Miller, who asserted the State was afraid to sue for the tax. "They know I would prove the law unconstitutional," he said.

Mayor Miller said he had made no return for State income taxes since three years ago when he offered a return in which he deducted his annual losses from his income. This is not permissible under the law, which provides a $500 fine or one year imprisonment or both for failure to make tax returns. The Missouri Supreme Court has upheld the law.

TREASURY DEBT ISSUE OVERSUBSCRIBED 3 TIMES

Washington, June 11 (A.P.).—Subscriptions to the Treasury's latest issue of of certificates of indebtedness, which were to have approximated $125,000,000, were three times the total asked for.

The subscriptions were closed last night. The issue, which was, the smallest floated by the Treasury in its postwar financing, will be used, along with June 15 tax receipts, to retire $400,000,000 in maturing securities.

ANTI-SCREEN ORDINANCE FOR SALOON IS VETOED

Rahway, N. J., June 11 (A.P.).—Mayor Thomas A. Fyffe has vetoed an anti-screen ordinance adopted by the City Council. In a letter to City Clerk Isabelle Waybrant, made public today, the Mayor said that measures requiring the removal of all screens from places where near-beer is sold are a drastic proposal and an infringement upon privacy.

Haverhill Lodge of the "Best People On Earth" is confident that this prepossessing young person will capture the beauty title of "Miss Massachusetts" from the beauties entered by fifty-five other Elk lodges throughout the State at the meeting of the Massachusetts Elks Association in Swampscott, June 14 to 17. She is Miss Mary McCarthy of No. 127 Cedar street, Haverhill, and is accordingly presented by the Boston Evening American. The convention will be under the auspices of Lynn Lodge.

BOY SLAYER, 9, DESERTED BY FAMILY

Lowell, June 11.—With the exception of his counsel, Daniel J. Donahue, not a relative or friend has visited John Veres, the nine-year-old Lowell boy, who is held in East Cambridge on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the drowning of Vivian Husson, nineteen months old, of Lowell.

In spite of failure of members of his family to visit him, the boy is perfectly contented and happy in his new surroundings, according to Mr. Donahue. He is not confined in the jail, but is held in the hospital, under the supervision of the head nurse.

The boy has become a favorite with prison attaches and inmates. They feel that while the crime to which he confessed was atrocious, he is a victim of environment. Many toys, probably more than he ever had in his life, have been given to the little prisoner since his incarceration.

Just what will be done with the boy is a difficult problem confronting the authorities. If the Department of Mental Diseases, after an examination this week, decides he is mentally competent, the case will either go to trial or be nolle prossed.

In the event the boy is declared mentally deficient, he may be sent to an institution for feeble-minded boys to the Middlesex County Training School.

before in one day. He is convinced "that the Northwest is patriotic." The Northwest returns the compliment, and believes that "Coolidge is patriotic," so everybody is happy.

IT IS JUST as well to admit that all Americans are patriotic, making certain allowances for differences in patriotism. Some gentlemen believe that patriotism consists in seeing to it that big corporations are enabled to pay big dividends.

Others think patriotism consists in tearing down the big corporations and reducing them to grief. Both are wrong.

THE RIFFIANS are fighting against the French and Spanish combined, with desperate courage, in a fight that originally was against the Spaniards. Abd-El-Krim, the Riffian leader, is an intelligent man, and must possess real generalship to have dealt as he did with the Spaniards, as brave fighters as any in the world.

At present the French and Spanish air forces are uniting, and that attack even the courage of the Arabs, defending their rights in their own land, will find it hard to meet. Courage and patriotism cannot conquer science, fighting from the air.

THE JAPANESE navy asks for $320,000,000 more to build forty new fighting ships. That ought to interest our sweet, gentle-hearted "statesmen" that agreed to junk the brand new ships we had just built or were building.

THREE HUB MEN FLEE JAIL AND RUM CHARGE

Plymouth, June 11.—A boresome thing it is, this being arrested as a rum runner and it became so boresome today to Joe Some, John Alfred and Frank Bova of Boston that in sheer ennui they walked out of police headquarters.

Like the old jingle—then there were four—because Leo Gilbert of Plymouth, George Whitman of Malden and Joe Rose and Jimmy Ferrioli of the Hub, who were not so bored, were left as prisoners out of the original seven captured.

The men were captured early today at the mouth of Jones River in Kingston by Captain Merritt and some of his crew of the Brant Rock Coast Guard station in Marshfield.

Captain Merritt, tiring of chasing rum runners at sea, took to land in an automobile as the midnight hour flopped the calendar into today and came upon the seven men, two trucks and sedan at the river mouth. The trucks and sedan were loaded with alcohol and together with the men were taken to Plymouth police headquarters.

From the guardroom in which the men were placed a rear door leads into the police garage, which also has a door, this door leading into the cool morning air.

Some and Alfred and Bova went forth calmly into the dawn by this route and now the police are hunting them. The other four men were held for the Federal authorities.

RESCUE DISQUALIFIES BALLOON RACE WINNER

Corunna, Spain, June 11.—It was reported here today that the Belgian, M. Veenstra, pilot of the balloon Prince Leopold, who had been declared winner o fthe Gordon Bennett Cub balloon race that started from Brussels Sunday, might be disqualified.

Reports here said he did not descend on land, but came down at sea off the northwestern coast of Spain. He was said to have been in the water six hours and to have been rescued by a passing steamship. Accepting of aid would disqualify him.

DONALD LOWRIE TELLS WHY HE IS DYING IN PRISON HOSPITAL

WARDEN'S APRIL 1ST JOKE

Osborne Visits Sing Sing Disguised as Disgruntled Taxpayer

By DONALD LOWRIE
CHAPTER XLIV.

In no public office that I know of is it more essential for the holder to have a sense of humor than in that of prison warden. A warden without a streak of humor in his make-up is bound to be demoralized by the continual tragedy and cares of his office.

Some writers have described Tom Osborne as being "ascetic" in appearance, but appearances are frequently misleading. In his daily work and when relaxing at lunch or dinner, or when speaking from a public platform, he consistently exhibited an unusually keen sense of humor.

He therefore appreciated in full measure what happened at Sing Sing on the first of April, 1915. He was away that day, as was also Johnson, his assistant.

About 9:30 that morning, Mr. Malley, the holdover clerk in the front office, came into the warden's office where I was at work and announced that a "queer looking" visitor had arrived and wished to inspect the prison.

Enter 'Mr. Marsh of Buffalo' and Black Cigar

"He says he's a business man and taxpayer at Buffalo," said Malley, "but he looks to me more like a blackhander or anarchist. There's something queer about him. Thought I'd better see you before letting him go through."

"Show him in," I replied. "It won't do any harm to give him the once over."

Malley withdrew and presently returned with a long-haired begoggled, wheezy individual with protuberant stomach, and wearing clothes of the vintage of 1890. He was smoking a huge, black cigar, emitting puffs in rapid succession. I confess I was startled. Malley's use of the word "anarchist" seemed entirely apropos.

"Mr. Marsh of Buffalo, Mr. Lowrie," said Malley. "He wishes to inspect the prison."

I acknowledged the introduction, at the same time making some commonplace remarks. Something in the appearance of the visitor puzzled me as well as startled me.

"I hear you're running a play house, a summer resort here," he said, half pugnaciously. "I pay good

FULLER THANKS RESCUER OF CHILDREN

North Hampton, N. H., June 11.—Ellas Card, a fisherman of North Hampton, is a happy man today. He also has qualified as the town's champion lifesaver.

Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts presented Card with $100 for saving his two children from possible drowning last Saturday.

The Governor brought his family here to escape the heat of Boston, Saturday morning. In the afternoon, the three children, Lydia aged 12, Mary, aged 8, and Alvan, Jr., 7, climbed into the boat which had just been launched. A short time later the oldest child got out of the boat, and the wind carried the dory out to sea.

In response to the children's cries the Governor's chauffeur jumped into the water in an attempt to reach the drifting boat, but the current was too strong for him, and he had to return to shore.

In the meantime, Card was summoned. He launched his dory and towed the runaway boat ashore.

A year ago Card saved the children when they were marooned on a reef by a rising tide.

San Francisco, June 11.—Far out on the Pacific four yachts are well under way in the Island of Tahiti in the luxury sporting boat race attempted before night the craft should have completed about 185 miles of the 3,665-mile trek.

The E. B. Parker's Idalia and the Malolo, owned and piloted by J. C. Dixon, are radio-equipped and are expected to keep in touch with ships at sea.

Every boat is being skippered by its owners. L. A. Norris at the wheel of the favorite of the race, the Martinez, and Mark Pennau is pilot of the Sheerline, a ketch.

48 COTTAGES ARE DESTROYED BY BIG BASS POINT, NAHANT, BLAZE

RESORT IS SAVED BY BOSTON FIRE BOAT; MANY RESIDENTS IN NARROW ESCAPES

yards wide on Colby Hill, causing a loss estimated by Fire Chief Coles of Nahant at $300,000.

Scores of men, women and children, clad only in night clothes, were forced to flee into the wind swept streets of Nahant, leaving their possessions behind.

Many of the refugees were cared for by the Red Cross, which established headquarters at the Relay House, saved from the flames by a sudden shift in the wind.

At the same time the Salvation Army fed the sufferers, and turned over rooms to the small army of fire fighters. About half the burned structures were occupied, while the others were Summer places not yet opened for the season.

As Bass Point juts into the sea between Lynn and Swampscott, almost opposite White Court where President Coolidge will spend the Summer, the flames were visible for miles.

While not more than names of victims had been obtained by the authorities today, it was said that the foundations of seventy burned buildings had been counted by unofficial observers. It could not be determined whether all of them were cottages or part garages and outbuildings.

During the height of the fire the child of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Reynolds of No. 60 Gardiner road, who was ill with scarlet fever, was rushed to the Lynn Hospital. A short time later the cottage from which she had been taken was destroyed.

Many persons moved their furniture from their homes, but it was overtaken by the flames before they could get it to a place of safety.

WOMAN DISCOVERS FIRE.

Thousands of auboats, attracted by the spectacle, blocked the road from Lynn, hampering the firemen until a squad of Metropolitan policemen managed to gouge out a narrow passage.

The blaze started from a cigarette butt in the Winthrop cottage, a young men's clubhouse on Bay View road, near the Relay House, and, borne on an ocean breeze, raged through the district like a forest fire.

The fire was discovered by Frank Harrington, a waiter at the Relay House, who was reading a newspaper in bed. He ran to the house of Mrs. Ida Batchelder, No. 19 Bay View avenue, who telephoned the fire department.

Mrs. Batchelder, who lived next door to the Winthrop Cottage, in which the blaze started, said it was 30 minutes before the fire fighting apparatus arrived at the scene, although the fire house is only 300 yards away.

She also said the boys in the Winthrop Cottage had been setting off fireworks inside the structure last evening. About the time Mrs. Batchelder was giving the alarm Mrs. Richard Crocker, wife of a member of the Nahant fire department, was awakened by the roaring of the flames, clattering up her four child dren, she rushed out a few minutes before her cottage took fire.

When the local fire fighting apparatus reached the scene a number of cottages were in flames and several were already destroyed. Help was summoned from Lynn, Salem, Swampscott, Revere, Chelsea and other communities, but when the firemen arrived they were practically helpless. It was impossible to obtain enough water through the four-inch mains to do any good, and it was not until Engine 31, a Boston fireboat, arrived that the flames were checked.

SAVED BY FIREBOAT.

Equipped with extra hose, the crew of the fireboat laid line after line from the army dock, through which they pumped thousands of gallons of water, which effectively subdued the blaze.

Despite the fact that the fire broke out in the early hours when everyone was asleep, no lives were lost so far as could be learned, and only a few minor injuries were reported.

Soldiers from Forts Gardiner and Banks did yeoman service not only in protecting government property but in fighting the fire with bucket brigades and assisting cottagers to salvage their furniture and other possessions.

Members of the Nahant Coast Guard station, who were patrolling the waters of the bay for rum-runners, were recalled and assisted in fighting the flames. Metropolitan police and soldiers guarded the possessions of refugees piled up in the yard of the famous Relay House.

FLAMES MENACE FORT.

Telephone lines from Lynn to Nahant were put out of commission, except for a single line, but employes of the telephone company were busy today before the embers had cooled, making repairs.

From the Winthrop cottage the flames spread almost in less time than it takes to tell to the surrounding cottages, most of which were of light construction and burned rapidly.

Fanned by a strong west wind the fire swept over Colby hill unchecked. In desperation the Nahant authorities telephoned to Boston for aid and a fireboat was immediately dispatched to Nahant under forced draft.

The fireboat quickly ran lines ashore from the government pier. While the crew of the fireboat directed the work of the pumps, Chief Chase of the Lynn fire department directed the combined fire-fighting forces ashore.

The streams from the fireboat played over the buildings in the path of the flames, checked the progress of the fire and shortly after 7:30 the fire was finally under control.

While the property loss is the greatest in the history of Nahant, only one person was badly injured in the fire.

William Dusseault, son of Wilfred Dusseault, a Nahant real estate agent, while trying to save one of his father's cottages, fell from the roof of the structure and suffered a dislocated collar bone.

Most of the cottages and homes were occupied when the fire broke out, and so quickly did the flames spread that few of the families had time to secure anything save a few outer garments.

Patrolmen Peter Tierney and Timothy L. Deveney, the only two officers on duty at Bass Point when the fire broke out, ran from dwelling to dwelling throughout the entire section, rousing the sleeping occupants and ordering them to flee. Frank Herrington of the Relay House also assisted in rousing the neighborhood, and then assisted in aiding women and children who were fleeing, panic-stricken, from their homes in the path of the flames.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Charles Cabot Johnson, town treasurer of Nahant, whose home and the adjoining dwellings he owned were destroyed, narrowly escaped.

The Johnson home was one of the earliest structures burned. When Mr. Johnson was aroused, the rear of his home was in flames and it was with difficulty he assisted his wife and children to the street. Mr. Johnson's loss was $15,000.

Until the arrival of the fireboat the terrified residents of Nahant were fearful that the entire peninsula would be swept by the fire.

It was feared that the wind would shift and would drive the fire to the east. A number of large Summer hotels were close to the area where the fire raged and many times it was feared these structures were doomed. When the fire was finally checked it was within a short distance of the Hotel Brenton, while a shift in the wind at almost any time while the fire was burning would have caused the destruction of the Relay House.

Long before daylight, thousands of residents of Lynn, Salem, Swampscott and Revere, awakened by the fire apparatus dashing to the fire, made their way to Nahant. The boulevard, within a short time, was practically blocked with automobiles.

A large detachment of the metropolitan police were dispatched to the scene and after hours of work succeeded in opening up a traffic lane through the closely parked machines.

At daylight it was estimated that more than 10,000 spectators were in Nahant viewing the spectacular progress of the conflagration, while additional thousands were en route to the scene from all parts of Greater Boston.

RELAY HOUSE SAVED BY WIND

The fire, sweeping over the tip of Nahant, during the hours of darkness lighted up the sky so that the reflection could be seen from both the North and South Shore and from points many miles inland.

The police and fire stations in cities and towns within a radius of thirty miles of Boston were besieged with telephone calls from anxious residents.

The Relay House, one of the most famous Summer resort hotels in New England, was saved from destruction by the fact that the west wind carried the flames directly away from the hostelry. When it was seen the hotel was in no danger of destruction, the building was opened up for refugees from the fire, many of whom escaped from their cottages in scant attire and were suffering from the cold.

In the immense yard at the back of the Relay House there soon grew a small mountain of household furnishing and clothing, carried there by the excited cottagers.

The grounds offered the nearest available space where the effects rescued from the path of the flames would be safe.

Metropolitan police and soldiers aided in guarding this property although there were no attempts at looting reported.

Three Boston men, occupying the Chase cottage, directly adjoining the Winthrop cottage where the fire started, had an unusually narrow escape.

In the Chase cottage were Edward Zola of No. 19 Florence street, South End; Harry Diamond of No. 91 Waltham street, South End, and Max Kramer of No. 3 Waterford street, South End.

The trio were not awakened until the first floor of their own cottage was in flames. The stairways were blocked with smoke, and clad only in their sleeping garments, the youths were finally forced to jump from windows.

All three were injured in escaping from the bursting building. They secured some old clothing from neighbors and came to Boston in a taxicab where their injuries were treated at the City Hospital. Diamond and Kramer each had lacerations in their arms dressed, while Zola suffered an injury to his left foot.

When the first dozen cottages were emptied of their occupants the other members of the Summer colony were aroused by the noise of the arriving fire apparatus and within half an hour practically every person in Nahant was awake.

The embers set fire to a stable almost a quarter of a mile west of the section where the fire was burning, and this building was destroyed and two horses housed in the structure were burned to death.

The main cables connecting the Nahant exchange with Lynn and Boston were not in the path of the fire, but the burning of the cables on the point cut off the telephone service of scores of Summer residents.

Cutter-Grew Nuptials Celebrated at Wellesley

Event Notable One in Annals of Hub Smart Set

Betty Alden

THE SCENE OF BRIDAL ACTIVITIES—now all-pervading on the social scheme of things as June waxes and wanes—shifted yesterday to Wellesley and St. Andrew's Church for the ceremonial at the hour of noon which united Miss Ruth D. Grew and Richard Ammi Cutter.

A DISTINGUISHED COMPANY gathered at the church to witness the bridal, and later a still larger assemblage gathered for the informal reception at "Juniper Hill," as Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wigglesworth Grew, parents of the bride, call their country place in Dover.

BOTH THE BRIDE and bridegroom come of distinguished families, the first with a Boston background of lineage and position, and the second from the Cutters of Salem, a line closely identified with the days of the China trade when the old seaport was in its heyday. Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Cutter are his parents.

THE CUTTERS had representation in the bridal party by George Osgood Cutter, brother of the bridegroom, who was best man, and also by Miss Caroline Cutter, his sister, one of the two bridesmaids in attendance on the bride.

MISS HELEN GREW sister of the bride and one of the four daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grew, was a bridesmaid, and Mrs. James Waterhouse Angell, who was Miss Jane Norton Grew, was of the trio as matron of honor.

THE GREW-ANGELL wedding was a brilliant affair of some two years ago, and Mr. Angell—he is the son of President James W. Angell of Yale University—took his bride to make their home in New York.

Mrs. Gaspar G. Bacon, whose philanthropical endeavors just now centre about the Junior section of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

MR. ANGELL headed the usher squad. Another New Yorker serving in that capacity was Jerome Hoodley Greene, who married Miss Katharine Crane, daughter of Ralph Adams Crane, the architect of much note, and Mrs. Crane.

THAT TOO WAS an alliance of great distinction. The wedding had its inception settling in the small chapel designed and built by Mr. Crane on his country estate out in the little town of Sudbury.

THE JEROME CROSBY GREENES now make their home in Scarsdale, New York. Another out-of-towner in the usher squad was Horatio R. Rogers, of Evanston, Illinois, and still another Leonard Wheeler of Worcester. Thomas B. Coolidge and Henry Stevens, both of Brookline, also served.

THE REV. JOHN J. CALLEN, rector of St. Andrew's, read the marriage lines, and the bride walked up the aisle to the altar escorted by her father.

A GOWN OF WHITE satin with a train of the stately court mode, a veil of misty tulle and a graceful bouquet of fragrant valley lilies with their shining pointed leaves, was the conventional and always beautiful bridal array.

THE BRIDE'S three attendants wore white also. Their frocks were crepe and bouffant organdies with touches of green. Slippers of green velvet and leghorn hats with green velvet trimmings were costume accordant in keeping with a true Summertime atmosphere.

SOFT PASTEL TOUCHES were given by their bouquets. Mrs. Angell carried an arm cluster of lavender sweet peas, and Miss Grew and Miss Cutter had sweet peas of delicate pink.

THE NEW MRS. CUTTER after finishing school days went to Vassar for a degree and was graduated from that institution in 1921. Mr. Cutter graduated from Harvard the same year, and the engagement was announced by Mr. and Mrs. Grew that June.

GIVING IN MARRIAGE continues today with two ceremonials of much import on the cards. Miss Ellen Bancroft Dalton and Henry Deland Chandler's ceremonial at noon and Miss Eleanor Batchelder and Uriel Hasheil Crocker's in the late afternoon held a large society interest.

NEGRO OFFICER GIVES LIE TO BULLARD

Gordon Pins Blame for "Cowardice Under Fire" on the White Major; Lauds 92d

In a letter to the Boston Evening American, Eugene Gordon, colored, formerly a lieutenant in the Ninety-second Division, takes spirited issue with General Robert Lee Bullard as to the conduct of the negro soldiers of that division under fire.

He declares that the general condemns an entire race because one battalion of colored troops did not come up to Bullard's standards. He accuses the general of falsifying history. And he says the reason a certain battalion of the Ninety-second is criticized was that a white major lost self-control and control of his men.

Gordon was a second lieutenant in the First Battalion of the 367th Infantry, Ninety-second Division. He is now a first lieutenant of infantry in the Massachusetts National Guard.

TERMS IT FALSEHOOD.

In line with its policy of giving both sides of the story, the Boston Evening American prints the salient points of the letter. Here it is:

To the Boston Evening American:

It is evident that General Robert Lee Bullard intended to remove from the negroes any credit for having "won the war." In his so-called impressions he places the 92nd Division next to the last chapter to be written, this for the purpose, undoubtedly, of leaving with the reader a memory of men of whom the general said they "couldn't be made to fight." Immediately after telling of how this negro division flunked, the general ends his tale. He thereby cuts off from all further consideration the negroes as an important factor in the war.

I had read the memoirs intermittently, until there came that back-handed blow in the face of the 26th Division. Thereafter I followed it closely, for I was fascinated at the man's genius for plain, unadorned falsehood parading in the guise of truth. I desired to see how many other "errors" would creep in. Something, too, of his style intrigued me, for he has the knack of uttering untruths in an amazingly truth-like manner.

When I read his story of the 92nd Division I was at first angry; later I laughed. The man's colossal ego, his "Me and Pershing" attitude negatived, for me, any possible injury his canard may have caused. Yet, I could not help asking myself, "Why didn't the general tell the whole truth?"

BLAMES COMMAND.

Let us now come directly to the point. One battalion of the 365th Infantry of the 92nd Division had a most unfortunate experience in the Argonne. Some of its units became demoralized and some of its members actually showed fear. But there was a reason for that state of affairs. It was the same reason which is always found where poor morale in troops exists; lack of intelligence, courage and leadership in the higher command; a command which could not inspire loyalty to duty.

A white major not only actually "held out" before the enemy, but he was so thoroughly cowed on the eve of battle that he shrank in his colonel's quarters until ordered to return to his troops. In the meantime his battalion was in charge of Captain Wormley Jones, in civilian life a colored policeman of Washington, D. C., who, because of his bravery and resourcefulness, was acted in divisional orders.

The weakling commander of this battalion, when he had finally been driven back to his command, gave contradictory orders, often countermanding other orders, and generally demoralizing an already disorganized unit. Every officer, white and colored, of the Ninety-second Division knew of his cowardice and discussed it.

WHITE MAJOR PROMOTED.

At that time (about September 25, 1918) they knew also that two other colored officers, Lieutenants Dent and Goodlow, had received high praise for exceptional bravery in action. Dent, incidentally, was made captain as a reward for his deed. The major was made colonel.

So much for that. Every statement made here can be supported with affidavits and General Bullard knows that, too, if he knows anything.

As to there being only one Negro captured by the whole 27,000 men in three weeks—general, how could you! Why of you will forgive this personal reference) my two patrols alone, on two successive daylight raids, took seven prisoners. That fact is clearly recorded in the files of the Ninety-second Division, the War Department.

Others in the same battalion (the First, 372d Infantry) were constantly, until the armistice was signed, bringing in prisoners. War Department records show that, too. It is also a matter of record that for this good work our battalion was sent to Noveant, in Lorraine, after the armistice, to receive, feed and care for returning prisoners of war who were being released from stockades in Metz.

As to negroes' relations with the French civilian population—well, many of us still carry on a correspondence with friends made in those days.

REVERE MAN IN QUINCY COURT AFTER CHASE

The appearance of Harry Brown of Revere in Quincy Court today on charges of illegally transporting liquor in an automobile revealed the thrilling story of a chase in which shots were fired that preceded his arrest.

Brown refused to stop his automobile at Braintree Five Corners on the signal of State Officer Dronillard, who gave chase on his motor cycle.

From Willard street, Braintree, to Crescent street, to Furnace Brook Parkway, to the State Boulevard and Adams street, Quincy, Brown went into high speed. Five shots fired by the pursuing officer were ignored.

COUPLE WED 69 YEARS SCORN 'FREEDOM'

No "New-Fangled Stuff" for John E. Hubbell, 91, or Wife, 89, in Lexington Home

Sixty-nine years ago today they were married in New York. And they "lived happily ever after."

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hubbell observed their sixty-ninth wedding anniversary today at their home, No. 32 Muzzey street, in historic Lexington.

"This new freedom" never interested the patriarchal couple, the husband ninety-one years old, the wife eighty-nine.

They have been residents of Lexington only a few years. Their son, the Rev. Chauncey G. Hubbell, and his family, live with them.

Mr. Hubbell is the oldest man in Lexington. He and his wife are believed to be the oldest couple in the town, or for many miles around.

There was no public observance of the occasion, but a number of congratulatory letters were received and a few intimate friends of the family called.

Mr. Hubbell is in fairly good health and able to get around town. He frequently walks to the store to make household purchases.

Mrs. Hubbell is quite feeble. She rarely gets out, except to sit on the porch in mild weather.

CARMEN PLAN ARBITRATION FIGHT

Call Special Meeting to Give Added Power to Representatives in Dispute

Ten thousands of motormen and conductors employed by the Boston Elevated, at a mass meeting called for tonight in Ford Hall, are expected to vote added powers in their representatives who are deadlocked with the Elevated trustees over the method of arbitrating wage disputes.

The representatives of the Boston Car Men's Union have arranged for the mass meeting in the belief that if additional powers are granted them, they can conduct a more aggressive fight in the controversy.

The mass meeting of the carmen was determined on at the car houses and notices were immediately posted in the car barns.

Attorney Vahey and Roland W. Boynton failed to agree on a third member of the board of arbitration

How to Avoid "Rings" in Removing Grease Spots

1. Place a clean cloth or blotter under the Grease Spot. (This is to carry away the Grease as it runs through the fabric after it is dissolved by the Carbona.)
2. Saturate a clean cloth with Carbona, using it freely, and gently rub the Grease Spot back and forth with a sweeping motion as illustrated—never rub in circles. Raise your hand at the end of each stroke after passing the edge of the spot. (This blends the edges of the spot cleaned with the rest of the fabric and prevents a "ring".)
3. Rub gently as it is the Carbona that cleans, not the rubbing.

GETTING READY FOR AMERICAN'S FLIGHT

Mrs. Walter I. Badger, one of the patronesses. (Photo by White.)

Luke D. Mullen, general chairman of the June 17 committee.

Tuning up the engine on one of the planes that will take part in the Boston Evening American's "sealed orders" flight.

Thousands in Massachusetts and Rhode Island to Witness Boston Evening American's Prize Contest

"How many persons who visit Bunker Hill next Wednesday to witness the prize air flight contest of the Boston Evening American will be flying to Florida for a week-end visit five or ten years hence?" asks Luke D. Mullen, chairman of the Bunker Hill Day celebration committee, in endorsing this newspaper's project.

Mr. Mullen is one of Boston's far-sighted citizens who realizes the possibilities of commercial aviation in the near future, as well as the necessity for proper air preparation for national defense.

Hundreds of thousands of people in Massachusetts and Rhode Island will witness the Prize Flight. According to the latest plan of the committee of National Guard officers, headed by Major Charles H. Woolley, commanding officer of 26th Division Air Service, the aviators will fly to Worcester, Providence and Plymouth, from Boston. Two airplanes will fly to each of these three cities.

WHERE PLANES WILL GO.

As the orders of each pilot will be sealed, not to be read until he "hops off" at Boston Airport, none of the fliers will know in advance what his assignment is.

The planes that fly to and from Worcester will pass over Chestnut Hill, Wellesley, Natick, Framingham, Southboro, and Westboro. Those that visit Providence will fly over Wrentham, Millis, Mansfield and Pawtucket. Those assigned to fly to historic Plymouth will be viewed from towns along the South Shore.

Mr. Mullen's statement relative to the Boston Evening American's Flight Contest follows:

By LUKE D. MULLEN,
Chairman Bunker Hill Day Celebration Committee.

The $500 "sealed orders" prize air flight contest under the auspices of the Boston Evening American on June 17 will serve a valuable purpose, in addition to giving a thrill to thousands of persons who will visit Charlestown on that day to participate in the 150th anniversary celebration of Bunker Hill Day.

The proposed prize flight clearly indicates the public spirit of the Boston Evening American. This flight contest will materially help in making the Bunker Hill Day celebration next week the greatest ever. As chairman of the Bunker Hill Day committee it gives me much happiness to endorse the Boston Evening American's project.

When the aviators participating in the "sealed orders" flight guide their planes over Bunker Hill monument it will give the assembled thousands of spectators be ow something to think about. It will give them an opportunity to think of the progress made during the past 150 years in weapons of national defence.

As the throngs at Bunker Hill monument gaze upward to observe the airplanes and then think of the old flint-lock guns used by the Revolutionary patriots who fought near that monument to throw off England's yoke, it will give them plenty of material for their meditation. What marvelous improvements in methods in the short space of 150 years! What changes will the next 150 years produce?

The sight of these airplanes also will give the assembled throngs a chance to think of the fact that this country needs many more aircraft to defend its coast line in case of invasion by a foe from Europe.

The possibilities of commercial aviation will also be a fruitful subject for thought. How many of the spectators who view the stunts of the aviators on the 17th will be traveling from Boston to Florida for a week-end five or ten years hence via aircraft playing between both places on regular schedule?

Such contests as this of the Evening American tend to stimulate public interest in such matters.

Recent additions to the list of patronesses include Miss Hope Gray, Mrs. Robert H. Stevenson, Jr., Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, Mrs. Charles P. Greenough, 2d, and Mrs. Benjamin F. Pitman.

$60,000 Cement in Medford 'Hole' Goes to Waste

The heavy cement foundations constructed by the city of Medford nine years ago at a cost of more than $60,000 for its proposed City Hall are being broken up by a drill and steam shovel and thrown into the discard by the new owners of the "City Hole" in Medford square, who will be obliged to construct new foundations for their business block. The old foundations were not sunk to a sufficient depth to permit street floor stores to be built.

'SONS OF RICH' AS SLEUTHS, KAHN'S PLAN

Millionaire's Jazz-Playing Son Tells Cops He Could Help Solve Society Crimes

New York, June 11 (A.P.)—With a few ideas on the need of assistance to the police in solving mysteries of high life, Roger Wolff Kahn, 17-year-old son of Otto H. Kahn, international banker, trap drummer extraordinary and jazz orchestra leader, has hopped into the front pages again.

Made an honorary city detective when he entertained regular detectives last night at a hotel where his orchestra is playing, he revealed a scheme of his for forming an auxiliary law enforcement group composed of sons of wealthy New Yorkers.

"The police always seem to fall down in solving crime mysteries in social circles," he said. "But I'm on the inside, see. I know a good many other chaps who are the sons of rich men. They can help me out."

Roger received a gold badge, the same kind as bestowed by the police on Caruso, Oscar of the Waldof and sundry other swillians.

Some commentators made much of the fact that Roger's dinner and remarks were at the opening of a roof garden where he is to play.

MEDFORD SPLIT ON FITZGERALD INQUIRY

Social Leaders to Be Called to Testify at Hearing on Friday

Sensational evidence is expected at the public hearing Friday night at Medford when John J. FitzGerald, suspended chairman of the Public Welfare Board, will be given an opportunity to tell his story in the controversy which has split Medford politics wide open.

Chairman FitzGerald claims that his suspension is illegal, unjust and unfair. He has asked for a public hearing, although the investigation of the department, which was under way when Mayor Coolidge took the matter out of the hands of the Aldermen and suspended FitzGerald before the Aldermen had a chance to prepare a report, was held behind closed doors.

SOLDIER TAKES OUT AMERICAN POLICY

Sergeant Peter G. Grosse of the improvement committee of F Company, 101st Infantry, is a believer in preparedness, individual as well as national. So he dropped into the Insurance Department of the Boston Evening American and took out a $7,500 travel-accident policy. While signing up, the sergeant told of the plan for every man in the company to subscribe for a policy and for the company to insure at its own expense every recruit between now and July 8.

ENGLAND BLAMED FOR JUMP IN RUBBER PRICE

Akron, O., June 11.—Directors of the Rubber Association of America, representing the leading rubber companies of this continent, met here today at the call of President W. O. Rutherford to discuss the present crude rubber situation caused by the British rubber restriction act. Reports prior to the meeting were that drastic measures would be taken for relief of American consumers.

Because of the British act, rubber company officials pointed out, crude rubber prices have advanced from 17 cents a pound to 78 cents within a year, and notwithstanding they have twice increased the price of tires from 5 to 20 per cent., the manufacturers are finding it difficult to operate at the present basic raw material prices.

INSURANCE FOR EVERY MAN IN CO. F, 101ST

Non. Com. Tells of Plan as He Takes Out Policy for Himself

The preparedness of a nation rests chiefly in its land and sea military forces, and of all these protective units, Co. F of the 101st Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, intends to be most prepared.

Every member of Co. F will take out one of the Boston Evening American's extraordinary $7,500 accident insurance policies and every recruit entering the organization between today and July 8 will also be given a policy by the company.

Sergeant Peter G. Grosse, representing the Improvement Committee of Co. F, introduced himself in the Insurance Department of the Boston Evening American today and told of the intention of the committee to insure every member of the company.

FINANCIAL PREPAREDNESS.

After signing a policy for himself, Sergeant Grosse said:

"The improvement committee consists of ten members of Co. F, whose purpose it is to devise means for making the company the best in the 101st Regiment.

"The selling of the men is unpermissible in the minds of the committee, including safety and protection. Risks everywhere and under the workmen. Sometimes an accident results, leaving the victim unable to continue making his living.

"The only substitute we can see for good health is financial preparedness and such is best obtainable through the $7.50 policy offered by the Progressive Boston Evening American.

CIRCULAR LETTER.

"Our commanding officer, John A. Riley, has the interest of each man at heart and approves of the proposition. Also does he approve of the Committee's plan to pay the one dollar insurance premium for every recruit joining up with Co. F."

The following letter has been sent to every man in the company by the committee:

"The Improvement Committee unanimously resolved to recommend and advise the proposal of protecting every member of Company F with a Boston Evening American $7,500 policy.

"The committee also offers payment of the one dollar requirement for any young man who enlists in Co. F within the next month. This offer closes July 8, 1925.

HOW TO GET POLICY.

"It is understood that these policies shall be in effect from date and covering the camp tour which begins July 11, 1925, for fifteen days at Camp Devens, Mass.

"Our expression of thanks be presented to the Boston Evening American for the opportunity of making such insurance possible at a small cost.

LANDLADY SUED BY COUPLE AFTER GAS EXPLOSION

Because their landlady permitted illuminating gas to escape, resulting in an explosion which injured him and his wife, Carl Magnuson of Everett has brought suit against Olivia B. The couple charge that Mrs. Gottholm allowed illuminating gas to escape by failure to keep the pipes plugged. Because of the alleged negligence, the plaintiffs declare they were suffocated, burned and otherwise injured.

"NEVER in the world has there come out of a war as clean a body of men as the Americans who served in Europe. They have set a standard for all time," writes Gen. Bullard in today's chapter of his memoirs, describing how the A. E. F. was amused and kept fit in France after the armistice.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

AFTER THE ARMISTICE

SOON after the suspension of hostilities an officer in charge of one of our schools for the instruction of officers and non-commissioned officers found it necessary, he afterward told me, to order martial some two hundred—most of them officers—for inattention and rudeness of discipline in his school.

Fenway Sidelights

WHEN the Sox go bad, they do it in a big way.

THIS was old timers day, with Babe Ruth and Quinn Ward to pitch.

JIMMY AUSTIN, assistant Brown mentor, is now connected with the Red Sox.

IKE BOONE made a few errors, but he can run the bases. He showed that he is fast on his feet.

JOHNNY TOBIN, the regular St. Louis right fielder, has some interesting things to say on baseball and the players. He underrates Sammy Rice, looks like a real ball player.

THE gang likes Joe Bush and gave him a hand when he appeared on the lines. Joseph puts a lot of pep into a game even when he's a spectator.

BRAVES BATTLE FOR THIRD STRAIGHT

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 11.—Three straight is Bancroft's orders to even up for the sweep the Pirates made on Boston. Either Cooney or Hen ton will go to the mound and will be opposed by Yde or Kremer.

In last two games the Braves have hit consistently for a total of 31 hits, 24 in the series. They have averaged six runs per game. The Pirates had one lay day and then were effectually stopped by Barnes and Grimes. Welsh has been a thorn in the side of the Pirates who have been a mine at right field stands. He has taken some runs which would have gotten away from most right fielders. Padgett robbed Smith and Bigbee of extra base hits by intercepting liners yesterday.

HUBBARD ATTEMPTS TO BREAK BROAD JUMP MARK

Chicago, June 11 (A.P.).—De Hart Hubbard of the University of Michigan negro athlete, broad jumper de luxe and one of the leading college sprinters in America, will wind up his intercollegiate career here next Saturday in a supreme effort to establish a new world's record in the running broad jump and also equal the world's mark for the century dash.

Hubbard will compete in both these events in the national collegiate track and field meet at the University of Chicago.

Hubbard won the dash in the Penn relays and at the Western conference meet in Columbus, last Saturday, while Locke was the victor in the same event at the Kansas relays and later in the Duke games.

BOSTON Y. M. C. A. TEAM IN TWO-STATE TRACK MEET

Coach Elson and Captain John Lorenzo of the Boston Y. M. C. A. track team have their string of track stars busy getting into shape for the Two-State championship, which will be held Saturday afternoon in Lawrence.

ST. ALPHONSUS A. A. TO HOLD BIG TRACK MEET

St. Alphonsus Athletic Association of Roxbury will conduct a set of track games sanctioned by the New England A. A. A. U. at Russell Field, Cambridge, on Saturday, June 27. The following open events are part of the program: 100 yard dash, 440-yard run, 880-yard run and one-mile run. Entries are open to registered athletes and close on Thursday, June 25, with William H. Harrison, Jr., care of St. Alphonsus A. A., No. 80 Smith street, Roxbury.

TWO NEW TEAMS ON CARNEGIE GRID SCHEDULE

Troy, N. Y., June 11 (A.P.).—Carnegie Tech, M. I. T., and Maine appear for the first time on the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute basketball schedule for 1925-26. The schedule: December 11, University of Maine; 19, St. Lawrence; January 9, Union; 16, M. I. T.; 23, Clarkson Tech; 28, Pratt Institute; February 5, Buffalo & Buffalo, 6, Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh; 12, Swarthmore 20, Stevens at Hoboken; 27, Springfield, and March 6, Union at Schenectady.

SCHWAB TO REFEREE BIG AUTO CLASSIC

Altoona, Pa., June 10 (AP).—Charles M. Schwab is expected to act as honorary referee at the 200-mile championship automobile race on the Altoona speedway Saturday, officials have announced. Walter Hagen, former open golf champion, will be assistant starter.

In the qualifying trials, Leon Duray broke all records for a new ten record when he drove over a mile [illegible] Ascot Park last Labor Day.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

By Elsie Robinson

THEY'RE having a dreadful time at the Wilcox's tonight. Elsie Harvey, who was a Wilcox, buried her husband this morning.

After the funeral she and little Rose came back to live with her parents. Rather, they were brought back in a state of collapse.

Little Rose was hysterical with fright at the sight of this, her first funeral. It was dreadful enough to see Daddy sleeping in that box—knowing as hard as he wouldn't answer, though she called and called him.

But when they put him into the ground and shoveled the dirt on top of him she went half mad with horror. What were they doing to Daddy? Why did Mama let them do that terrible thing to Daddy? They mustn't—THEY MUSTN'T—

Then suddenly the tiny body went mercifully limp and she knew nothing more until she woke in grandma's bed where she now lies, moaning in fever.

Poor Etta does not mean. She is in a still, white collapse that is even more dangerous. She was brave until the funeral. She and Fred had watched death coming for so long. By some miracle, faith had been born in those dark, waiting hours and she had come to feel the futile trickery of the thing we call death. Fred was going away, but only a little way—of that she was sure. She had nerved herself to meet the change and silence and though it was terrible when it came, she was not without hope.

Sitting beside Fred in the darkened, flower-heaped room, she had been slowly wrapped in a new peace—had, for fleeting instants, felt that he was nearer than he had ever been before. If only she could hold on to that surety!

She had held onto it until the morning of the funeral. Even in that terrible moment when she and Fred were alone for the last time, the new peace had not left her. But when she stood beside that gaping hole, everything but her terror and loneliness was blotted out.

Fred was going into that hole—Fred who had been the wall about her life. Thoughts leaped on her like foul beasts from the grave it self. Thoughts of what was going to happen to that dear, dead body—the thought of what would become of her and little Rose, now that clods were barring her forever from the protection of his arms.

At that she went down screaming trying to reach him—calling on him to come and rescue her from the horror—

She hasn't known anyone for the last three hours. Doesn't move or notice. It seems as if the will to live had been paralyzed in that limp body.

A horrible picture? Yes—but a true one. Daily, scenes like this are being enacted all over the country. And it is all so cruel and needless.

"But you can't stop death!" you cry.

We can't stop death, but we can stop this hideous ritual which attends the disposal of our dead. We can start a new social convention which will permit women and children to stay in the home during the funeral—and relieve them of this abominable strain on their emotions.

There is neither Christianity nor decency in the custom which requires the attendance of women and children at a funeral. Such attendance is not a proof of love for those who have gone. Love seeks seclusion in its black hour, not publicity.

That publicity is the survival of the savage processions of our primitive days. It is as brutal and archaic as the jungle rites of the voodoo worshippers, and as strongly opposed to Christian philosophy or civilized decorum.

The morbid idea of the elaborate funeral procession is revolting and the presence of women and children in the procession is the very refinement of cruelty.

The nervous constitution of women and children makes such participation something beyond words and often does lasting injury to their mental health. Society should not require their attendance at funerals, but rather should frown on such attendance.

This is not a new thought. The wise and the more refined circles such attendance excites unfavorable comment.

It is not strange that America, which has done so much to render the domestic relations fine and beautiful, should have done nothing to free love's saddest hour from barbaric crudity?

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

NOW that the summer touring season is here, the different States are beautifying the highways by planting flowers on one side and motorcycle cops on the other.

THE tires on the bicycles come under the heading of rubber plants.

CONSTABLES in small towns who can't afford bikes are riding jackrabbits.

THOUSANDS of bunnies are being equipped with four-wheel brakes.

HIGHWAY policemen are a necessity. So many motorists burn up the road that we need motorcycle cops to put the fires out.

ONE guy was traveling along at seventy miles an hour. He said he was hurrying to the theatre, so the cop gave him a ticket.

AN hour later he was sitting in the municipal opera house watching a show where the judge was the only actor.

THIS was the first show he ever saw where he couldn't walk out between acts.

THE judge gave him such a heavy fine that he had to sell his automobile and wire for $10 besides.

SOME motorists drive through a town so fast that you'd think they were on their way to three fires.

THEY white paint farms and kill a lot of live stock. One farmer used to feed tacks to his hens so that they'd puncture a tire every time an automobile ran over them.

THE chickens ate so many tacks that they began laying eggs with nails in them.

IT got so bad that the country boarders had to open their eggs with a hammer.

WITH millions of hens being killed by automobiles, farmers are still asking that old riddle, "Why does a chicken cross the street?"

VERY few motorists will give a hen the right of way.

FARMERS raise chickens for the eggs, so the motorists run over them and let them lay.

RANCHERS ought to equip their hens with bumpers and shock absorbers.

AND chickens that wander up and down the highways after dark should wear tail lights.

RECKLESS drivers are getting more numerous every day. Something should be done to halt speeders; the railroads can't stop them all.

JOBS FOR THE IDEALIST

Fence Sharpening.

(Occupations you might take up if you are tired of what you are doing now).

HAVE you ever noticed those spiked iron fences surrounding rich folk's houses? Of course you have. Well, wealthy people continually complain that the point of the fences grow dull very quickly. Here is a golden opportunity for any ambitious man or woman to provide for his future. All that one needs to be a fence sharpener is a ladder, a file and a ready wit. Each spike should be sharpened until it is keen enough to penetrate the index finger with the slightest touch.

Book Marking.

Everyone has been annoyed by his failure to remember the page at which he has left off reading a book. This happens in almost every house in the country—and there are many such.

The clever young man or woman can earn a considerable sum each week by hiring out as a page reminder. Whenever the telephone or door bell rings, or there is some other distraction, the page reminder's task is to seize the book from the employer before it is automatically closed, thrust his thumb over the place last read and hold it there till the boss returns.

We know one girl who did this job so well her employer fell in love with her. They were divorced last week, and to relate, because she kept the radio going so that he couldn't concentrate on his reading.

THEY SEE A BRAVE LITTLE MOTHER.

By Foxy Grandpa

"FOXY GRANDPA," said Bobby running in from the barn one morning, "somebody's building a nest right up under the roof of the barn."

"Is that so?" I asked, laying down my paper. "And who may it be?"

"Mrs. Starling," announced Bobby.

"Fine," said I; "now they'll take care of our lawn and keep the corn free from those destructive leather-jacket grubs that just about ruin any crop."

"She won't be able to do much farming at present," said Bunny thoughtfully.

"Why not?" I asked.

"She'll be too much taken up with domestic duties for a while," he explained.

"Oh, yes," I laughed.

"Sure," said Bunny, "she's got her eggs to lay and her family to bring up. You know there is no more faithful or devoted mother in the world than a starling."

"Is that so?" I murmured.

"Yes," answered Bunny, "they're wonderful mothers. They'll risk anything for their children."

"I'm glad to hear that," I said. "They are the kind of creatures I am glad to have settle around us—where there is love and happiness."

"It's in the starling family, all right," said Bunny, shaking his head.

And Bunny was right, for I will tell you what happened to show us what an unselfish mother that little starling was, who built her home in the roof of our barn.

One day we were all sitting on the porch, when suddenly I saw Bunny's ears straighten and his nose wiggle. Then he sniffed the air.

"I smell smoke," said he nervously.

And in a very few moments I smell it myself. I jumped up and ran out to the barn.

The barn was on fire!

Quickly I sent Bobby to the telephone to call for help, while I ran in and got out the horses. Fortunately the cows were all out to pasture. The flames were leaping high now and I felt very sad to see my barn with its hay and grain look as if it were going right up in smoke.

We turned on our hose, but it did not do much good without the engine to pump it up.

"Here's the engine," shouted Bunny, as we heard the far off clang of the fire engine of our volunteer fire department.

We worked as hard as we could and right in the midst of it, Bunny shouted:

"Mrs. Starling."

Poor bird and her babies! We hadn't thought of her. I rushed around to the side of the barn where her nest was. There she was flitting miserably to and fro. The flames were licking her nest. Like a flash she suddenly darted right into the red flames and in a moment came out, carrying one of her babies. This she did four times, never stopping for a moment to think of herself, although her feathers were so singed that she looked naked.

The engine arrived and before long the fire was out. I am more than ever convinced it is Bunny's four lucky feet which bring us all of our good luck. I'm sure you've noticed how very fortunate we always are.

That night when we sat down to dinner and were talking things over we remembered the brave little starling mother.

"Wasn't that wonderful!" said Bobby, "just think, she flew right into the flames!"

"Mothers will do anything for their children, won't they?" said Bunny, and I thought his pink eyes looked very sad and a little moist.

FINANCE

By E. C. Forbes

Elementary schools, high schools, colleges, are this month pouring hundreds of thousands of graduates into the world of work. Does it hit of exaggeration to say a youth to succeed?

Well, Henry Ford has managed to do rather well without a college education. Edison was pronounced out of school before he was six as a hopeless dunce, incapable of learning anything. John D. Rockefeller is without a college education. The Emperor of Russia, Nicholas II, was not graduated. Nor are James J. Hill, the railroad king, another man who has been mighty busy at money, George F. Baker, the multi-millionaire banker and philanthropist, James Buchanan Duke, founder of the largest individual enterprise in the world, Samuel Insull, the greatest swindler of public utilities in the Middle West, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., head of Standard Oil and one of the most liberal givers to the whole field; Daniel G. Reuter, the well known leader in the cotton field; C. L. Tutwiler, one of those John M. Wilson, D. W. Brunton, A. E. Rhoades, Henry Bourne, among many notable giants. Louis D. Brandeis, Thos. R. Wilson, Woodrow Wilson, the brains of Germany, Henry Ford, Thomas A. Edison, Jr., and Thomas A. Edison, Sr., all possessed no college education. Many of the world's great presidents were self-educated.

If H. Hannah had no college H. Wilson Upham, class of 1917, Yale, had only a modicum of education. Mr. Upham is the former banker and broker who was convicted of using the mails to defraud investors in the Rex Beach mine scheme. He was sentenced to serve from 18 months to two years in the Atlanta penitentiary. Upham's trial produced a vast amount of testimony.

The foregoing would indicate, one may find success without a college education. But the odds are against it.

* * *

Boy Scouts in big BIFF, Treasury, commercial and executive jobs are to be found in numbers greater than those of any other single group of young men.

* * *

Education is a big BIFF. Industry, commerce, finance, transportation, mining, agriculture, all want men and boys of education. Of the more than 4,000,000 persons in the United States engaged in banking and finance, 1,000,000 have had a college education.

* * *

Power and force of the younger generation are the theme for the brilliant essay on "Youth" by Owen D. Young, chairman of the executive committee of the General Electric Company, which appears in the current issue of the Atlantic Monthly. Mr. Young is a man who has been through the mill. He started as a day laborer, having a very broad background. He has risen whereby he has gained more than a million dollars a year in salary.

And, of course, Owen D. Young and Thomas Edison are not by any manner of means the only men who have risen to the top without a college education.

The test of a job would seem to be this: Are the men who have had little schooling passed in the world more by those who have had a chance for such education possible.

* * *

As for success, one thing they are beginning to see in a training school for executives is that success is a college-bred coach endangered his career by showing personal interest in a man. He is a supposed sort of personal interest in a man. He is a supposed sort of personal interest in a man. He is a supposed sort of

"Where will I spend my vacation?" is the thought uppermost in the mind of many at this season.

Boston's Next Mayor

A Reply to the Request of Many Readers

On the third of next November those citizens of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts who are registered voters in the city of Boston will elect a Mayor, a City Council and a School Committee—the Mayor for a four-year term, the Councilmen for two-year terms and the members of the School Committee for long and short terms.

To the many Boston readers of the Boston Evening American who have done us the honor to ask the attitude of this newspaper toward this all-important referendum we gladly reply as follows:

By the terms of the Boston City Charter the people are protected in the preference they have expressed for a non-partisan election of their city officials, the schemes of Republican politicians, masquerading as a self-styled "good" government organization, and the schemes of the Democratic politicians, masquerading as the political heirs of Thomas Jefferson, to the contrary notwithstanding.

If the people of Boston so desire, they can require that each and every candidate for Mayor shall resign his municipal, State or Federal office not later than August 1st—this to the end that the people may exercise their right to hold a non-partisan election.

If the people of Boston so desire, they can require that each and every candidate for Mayor shall put the seal of good faith upon his candidacy by pledging himself publicly not to become a candidate for any other office if elected Mayor of Boston, so long as he serves the people in that high office.

If the people of Boston so desire, they can require that each and every candidate for Mayor shall deal fairly with the people by giving them at the outset of his canvass, in simple and straightforward language, the program of achievement toward which his every effort will be directed in the event of his election as Mayor of Boston. And this applies with equal force to each and every candidate for the City Council and each and every candidate for the School Committee.

Because the Boston Evening American is a paper published, not for Democrats, not for Republicans, not for Independents, but for all the people, this newspaper will oppose any candidate for Mayor, now holding municipal, State or Federal office, who does not resign his office before entering actively upon his campaign for Mayor.

This will afford His Honor the Mayor of Boston, His Excellency the Governor of Massachusetts, and the President of the United States the opportunity that will be their due to fill all vacancies created within their respective jurisdictions by the resignations of those officeholders who, obedient to the letter and the spirit of the Boston City Charter, enter upon a non-partisan campaign for Mayor free from the obligations of office.

No candidate for Mayor of Boston, as we believe, should be elected who is not also willing to pledge himself not to become a candidate for any other office while holding the office of Mayor.

Every candidate for Mayor of Boston, as we believe, owes it alike to himself and to the voters of Boston to give them, in due season, a straightforward statement in specific terms of the program which his administration will support if he is elected Mayor next November.

The time has come, as the Boston Evening American believes, when the people of the capital city of the oldest Democracy in the Western world face the duty of exercising their right to enjoy a government of their own choice and to throw off the yoke of the tyrannical rule of political stepfathers chosen for them by others.

No capital city among the indestructible States of the indestructible Union is so shackled by the chains of "Stepfather" Government today as is the capital city of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The coming election will afford an opportunity to the self-respecting citizens of Boston, in every walk of life, to begin at least, in unity of spirit, the long, hard fight that lies ahead of them to repossess themselves of their own government.

In that fight, under honest and competent leadership, the people of Boston can, if they will, soon command sympathy and support from thousands upon thousands of Democrats and Republicans and Independents all over Massachusetts, who in their cities and towns today are not afflicted, as is the city of Boston, by the meddlesome interference of "Stepfather Rule" from Beacon Hill.

Protect Public Parks

Girl and Boy Scouts Could Be Used

Everybody knows how the beauty of the parks is injured by carelessness of visitors. Papers are strewn about, branches of trees are broken. Those that OWN the parks, the GREAT MASS OF PEOPLE, the very individuals that have the most interest to PRESERVE the parks and their beauty, show too often stupid recklessness and carelessness in the care of their own property.

An intelligent and earnest young woman, Mrs. I. S., offers the following wise suggestions for park protection:

Children never forget what is planted in their minds when they are young.

Children in the public schools, if possible with use of moving pictures and other illustrations, should be taught to love, respect and PROTECT public parks. And they should be taught to understand and admire nature's beauties—magnificent trees, beautiful flowers, smooth velvet grass—and the other charms of a perfect landscape.

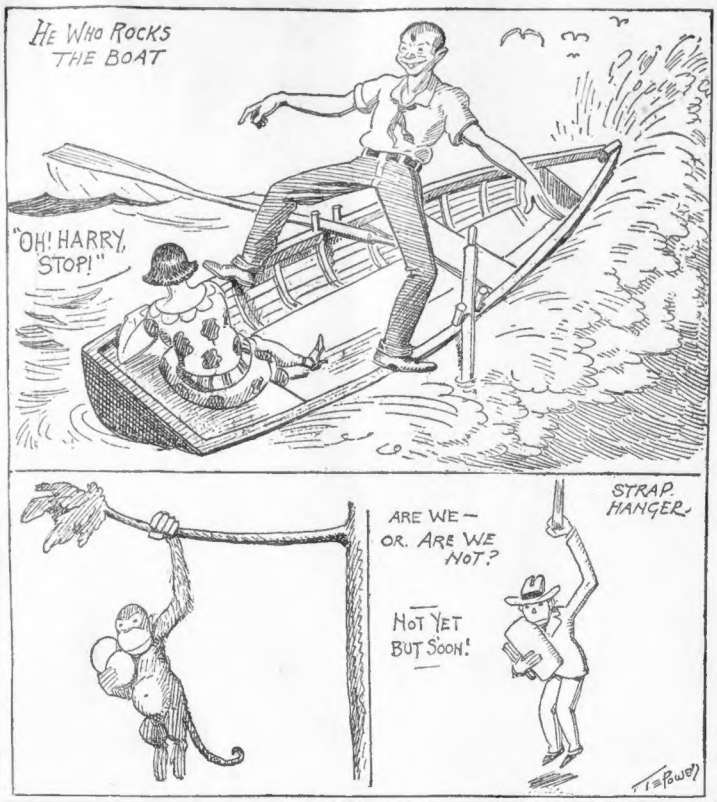
To make children appreciate the beauty of parks, to make them realize that the parks BELONG TO THEM, their fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, and that it is their duty to protect them, would be the first step in park preservation.

The futile discussion of teaching religion in public schools, which the Constitution by implication forbids, might well be set aside and teaching love of nature's beauties, the great gift of God's goodness, substituted for it, leaving religion to religious teachers better able to deal with it than public school teachers.

While the young children are learning with their first public school lessons to respect and protect the parks, the boy and girl scouts ought to be organized as "Public Park Monitors," in little bands, to gather up the papers scattered among bushes, and on the grass.

In this work they could be of great service. They would be instructed, politely, of course, and with due deference to age, to say to reckless adult picnickers, "We think a lot of these parks; we try to protect them and keep them clean. What YOU throw on the grass WE must pick up. Won't you please set a good example to others?"

How Not to Grow Old -:- -:- By T. E. Power



MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

VERILY, verily, my Daughter, are not the sleeves of the gods filled with laughter when they hear mortals speak of "love?"

For, lo, one saith, "It is the soul's Paradise!", and another saith, "It is the Fool's Paradise!" And peradventure, BOTH are right!

Go to. What damsel hath not said in her heart "I shall marry none but mine ideal?" Even an Apollo, with the grace of Maurice, the profile of a Prince of Wales, the courage of an air-fighter, and the soul of a poet! For, alas, I am SO difficult to please!"

Helen Rowland

Yet, behold, she meeteth a half-portion sheik, with the polish of a taxi driver, the profile of a cartoon hero, the manners of a checkroom boy, the wit of last year's almanac and the grace of a coal-heaver.

And, lo, her eyes are blinded—and it is all over with her!

He saith the word and the wedding day is set!

And what youth hath not said, "Alas, I shall never marry! For, where shall I find, in this world of flappers and painted women, a damsel who shall combine the simplicity of a Mary Pickford heroine with the fascination of a Gloria Swanson, the beauty of the three graces with the wit of Marguerite de Valois, the talents of a trained nurse with the virtues of Caesar's wife, the charms of a beauty chorus with the temper of a saint?

For nothing less shall tempt me —and I am an Artful Dodger!"

And, lo, even while he speaketh, there cometh a bobbed-hair "bandit," with rouged knees, a sunburned nose, a baby lisp, the intelligence of a clothes manikin, the soul of an Angora kitten and the subtility of a saxophone—and leadeth him to the altar with one hand!

And he, also, is finished.

For, verily, verily, love is but a strange hallucination, which stimulateth the imagination, gildeth dull facts with refined gold, and transformeth stupidity into virtue, loudness into brilliancy, impudence into wit and homeliness into beauty.

And an "Ideal" is but the human peg on which a man hangeth his illusions and a woman drapeth her dreams.

How, then, can any man know when love or lightning or appendicitis shall strike him helpless?

And why shall not the sleeves of the gods be filled with laughter when they hear young mortals say "I shall never marry!"

SELAH.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Expert on Drug Problems

Editor Boston Evening American:

I was very much interested in your editorial concerning the opium traffic. As Tombs physician in New York I have observed and treated more than twenty-five thousand drug addicts, and am sorry to state that up to the present we do not seem to have made much headway towards a solution of the problem.

Concerning England. We do not have to depend on that country for such supply as we need for legitimate medical purposes. Opium has been grown in this country, and there is no reason why the finest grade drug should not be grown and controlled by this country.

If the production were supervised by the Department of Agriculture, we would in a short time be independent of England, and by preventing exporting or importing of the drug and treating addicts as sick people we would reach an ultimate solution of the problem.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

THERE were shadows that crept through the whispering grass and low was the south wind's croon, while the willows bent down for the breeze to pass when the mocking-bird sang to the moon. Then the earth was wrapped in the night's embrace and the star-flowers bloomed in the sky, as the lily-buds lie on a dark pool's face, so the stars went drifting by. Oh, the night was sweet with the breath of the rose and the scent of the jasmine flower, and up from the marshes a pale mist rose at the midnight's mystic hour. And my spirit was with you the whole night through; with the thought of you, sweeter than June, as I walked in the garden drenched with dew, while the mocking-bird sang to the moon.

ELWOOD HAYNES, WHO INVENTED AUTO

By DR. FRANK CRANE

NOT long ago Elwood Haynes died.

He was the man that invented and ran the first automobile in America.

His death calls attention to the fact that the business of making automobiles has sprung up like a mushroom over night and developed from a small affair to an immense industry.

Mr. Haynes was born in Portland, Indiana, October 14, 1857, so he was not a very old man at the time of his death. Within that brief lifetime, however, there was room enough for the development of one of the great business enterprises of the United States.

He invented and drove the first horseless carriage through the streets of Kokomo, Indiana, in 1893. When he first appeared with it a year later on Michigan Boulevard in Chicago at a speed of eight miles an hour he was ordered by the policeman to "get that contraption off the streets."

At that time the contraption was a novel thing and its principal use was to make noise and scare horses.

Nowadays Michigan Boulevard in Chicago and Fifth Avenue at Forty-second Street in New York are alive with automobiles. Everybody who is anybody has one.

Henry Ford has made it possible for poor people to ride in these machines and John D. Rockefeller and his associates have put the fuel supply within their reach financially.

In this short time the automobile has covered the earth. It is worming a burro out of business as a prospector on the plains. It is crossing the Desert of Sahara. It is exploring the wilds. Besides this it is the chief means of transportation in the great cities.

There is said to be one automobile for every man, woman and child in Los Angeles County.

They are so thick on the streets of cities that they make transportation a problem.

The automobile truck and truck bodies for buses are still in their infancy.

The automobile is competing with railroads for short hauls.

Recently an automobile business founded by the Dodge Brothers was bought for many millions of dollars by a banking syndicate and the public rapidly oversubscribed for the stock when issued.

That all this has happened within one brief lifetime is an illustration of the amazing progress of business in recent years.

MOON'S INFLUENCE ON HUMAN BEINGS

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Believing that the moon has some magnetic influence upon the human being, especially those epileptic, I wish to ask your opinion, which would be of interest to many, I have experimented with this ancient belief.—S. H., S."

IF you will consult the books and other writings of astronomers, you will find that they say very little on the subject of the moon's supposed influence over human beings and other forms of life on the earth.

This shows that very little is known about it, even by those whose business, as we may say, is to find out all that can possibly be discovered about the heavenly bodies and their relations to the earth.

Next to astronomers, among those who might be expected to know something of the moon's influences, other than its ordinary gravitational and light-giving effects, are agriculturists and meteorologists.

I think you will find that scientific agriculturists have no confidence in the traditional lunar influences over vegetation which many farmers and gardeners believe in, saying that their experience justifies such belief.

As far as I personally have looked into the matter, I have seen no evidence that the moon influences perceptibly the germination or growth of plants.

At the same time there is nothing inherently absurd in the supposition that, since the moon sends considerable light to the earth (reflected sunlight) and a perceptible amount of heat, and also has a slight but measurable effect upon the earth's magnetism, it may influence both animal and plant life in a manner more or less resembling that in which we know that the sun's radiant energy affects those things.

If the moon does exercise any such influence it owes its power to do so mainly to the sun, whose rays it both absorbs and reflects.

The apparent size of the moon's disk is almost exactly the same as that of the sun. If, then, it were a perfect reflecting mirror, it would give us as much light on a full moon night as we get from the sun in the daytime.

In fact, however, the full moon gives us only about one six hundred thousandth as much light as the sun.

In like manner the moon absorbs the heat rays from the sun and sends some of them back to us by reflection but in addition to the directly reflected heat rays the moon gives us others which it first absorbs, and then, as its surface becomes warmed, radiates away as if they were due to its own original temperature.

All together, the proportion of solar heat that thus finds its way to the earth by way of the moon is larger than that of the solar light that comes the same roundabout journey.

While the full moon's light, as above said, is about one 600,000th of the sun's, its heat, cold as it seems when seen sailing among the stars in the night sky, is, according to some measurements, as much as one 155,000th of the sun's.

From what has been said you may draw the conclusion that whatever the influence of moonlight and moon heat may be upon terrestrial life, its nature should not differ, except in intensity, from that of the sun's direct rays.

The meteorologists find no more ground for confidence in the traditional influences of the moon upon the weather and the clouds than the scientific agriculturists find in the similar traditions concerning lunar influences upon the growth of plants.

Scientific experiments have not confirmed the traditional influences, the belief in which is thought to rest upon insufficient observation and upon the acceptance of coincidence for casual relationship.

Finally we come to the question of the possibility of lunar influence over human ills. There is no doubt that the moon does exercise a magnetic influence upon the earth, but it is very slight, and I do not know of any way in which it has been shown to affect either health or disease.

One may readily imagine that it does affect them, under the impression produced by accidental coincidence, and one might also build up a system of lunar therapeutics on such imaginary basis, but it would have to wait for another age to give it scientific recognition.

ONCE-OVERS

ARE YOU ALWAYS IN A HURRY OR DO YOU KNOW HOW TO MANAGE INTELLIGENTLY?

Are you always in a hurry?

Always fluttering, flitting from one thing to another, jabbing here and there aimlessly.

You often make mistakes so ridiculous that you wonder at yourself.

It is the pressure of excitement which makes you so thoughtless.

Mistakes made in the performance of a duty, which is perfectly familiar to you, are due to carelessness.

Slower and fewer movements and sane move controlled by a thinking mind should result in more accomplished with less effort.

Under strong pressure you do not use good judgment if the pressure is continued indefinitely.

You may think the boss will believe you a valuable employe if you seem driven all the time, but the reverse is true.

The boss knows that if you managed your work well you would not be dashing hither and yon all the time with the number of errors you have allowed to creep in.
